

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT EASTERN DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON

Case No. 14-CV-03122(VEB)

HEATHER MARTINEZ,

Plaintiff,

vs.

CAROLYN W. COLVIN, Acting
Commissioner of Social Security,

Defendant.

DECISION AND ORDER

I. INTRODUCTION

In May of 2011, Plaintiff Heather Martinez applied for Supplemental Security Income (“SSI”) benefits under the Social Security Act. The Commissioner of Social Security denied the application.

1 Plaintiff, represented by D. James Tree, Esq., commenced this action seeking 2 judicial review of the Commissioner's denial of benefits pursuant to 42 U.S.C. §§ 3 405 (g) and 1383 (c)(3). The parties consented to the jurisdiction of a United States 4 Magistrate Judge. (Docket No. 7).

5 On March 2, 2015, the Honorable Rosanna Malouf Peterson, Chief United 6 States District Judge, referred this case to the undersigned pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 7 636(b)(1)(A) and (B). (Docket No. 18).

8 9 II. BACKGROUND

10 The procedural history may be summarized as follows:

11 Plaintiff applied for SSI benefits on May 17, 2011, alleging disability since 12 July 1, 2009. (T at 168-74).<sup>1</sup> The application was denied initially and on 13 reconsideration and Plaintiff requested a hearing before an Administrative Law 14 Judge ("ALJ"). On January 23, 2013, a hearing was held before ALJ Tom Morris.
15 (T at 34). Plaintiff appeared with her attorney and testified. (T at 42-43, 45-65).
16 The ALJ also received testimony from Paul Prachyl, a vocational expert (T at 41-42, 17 44, 65-72).

1 On February 22, 2013, the ALJ issued a written decision denying the 2 application and finding that Plaintiff was not entitled to benefits. (T at 16-33). The 3 ALJ's decision became the Commissioner's final decision on June 26, 2014, when 4 the Appeals Council denied Plaintiff's request for review. (T at 1-4).

5 On August 26, 2014, Plaintiff, acting by and through her counsel, timely 6 commenced this action by filing a Complaint in the United States District Court for 7 the Eastern District of Washington. (Docket No. 4). The Commissioner interposed 8 an Answer on November 3, 2014. (Docket No. 10).

9 Plaintiff filed a motion for summary judgment on February 2, 2015. (Docket 10 No. 14). The Commissioner moved for summary judgment on February 18, 2015.
11 (Docket No. 17). Plaintiff filed a reply brief on March 30, 2015. (Docket No. 20).

12 For the reasons set forth below, the Commissioner's motion is denied, 13 Plaintiff's motion is granted, and this case is remanded for calculation of benefits.

15 III. DISCUSSION

16 A. Sequential Evaluation Process

17 The Social Security Act ("the Act") defines disability as the "inability to 18 engage in any substantial gainful activity by reason of any medically determinable 19 physical or mental impairment which can be expected to result in death or which has 20

1 lasted or can be expected to last for a continuous period of not less than twelve
2 months.” 42 U.S.C. §§ 423(d)(1)(A), 1382c(a)(3)(A). The Act also provides that a 3 plaintiff shall be determined to be under a disability only if any impairments are of 4 such severity that a plaintiff is not only unable to do previous work but cannot, 5 considering plaintiff’s age, education and work experiences, engage in any other 6 substantial work which exists in the national economy. 42 U.S.C. §§ 423(d)(2)(A), 7 1382c(a)(3)(B). Thus, the definition of disability consists of both medical and 8 vocational components. Edlund v. Massanari, 253 F.3d 1152, 1156 (9th Cir. 2001).

9 The Commissioner has established a five-step sequential evaluation process 10 for determining whether a person is disabled. 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1520, 416.920. Step 11 one determines if the person is engaged in substantial gainful activities. If so, 12 benefits are denied. 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1520(a)(4)(i), 416.920(a)(4)(i). If not, the 13 decision maker proceeds to step two, which determines whether plaintiff has a 14 medially severe impairment or combination of impairments. 20 C.F.R. §§ 15 404.1520(a)(4)(ii), 416.920(a)(4)(ii).

16 If plaintiff does not have a severe impairment or combination of impairments, 17 the disability claim is denied. If the impairment is severe, the evaluation proceeds to 18 the third step, which compares plaintiff’s impairment with a number of listed 19 impairments acknowledged by the Commissioner to be so severe as to preclude 20

1 substantial gainful activity. 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1520(a)(4)(iii), 416.920(a)(4)(iii); 20
2 C.F.R. § 404 Subpt. P App. 1. If the impairment meets or equals one of the listed 3 impairments, plaintiff is conclusively presumed to be disabled. If the impairment is 4 not one conclusively presumed to be disabling, the evaluation proceeds to the fourth 5 step, which determines whether the impairment prevents plaintiff from performing 6 work which was performed in the past. If a plaintiff is able to perform previous work 7 that plaintiff is deemed not disabled. 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1520(a)(4)(iv), 8 416.920(a)(4)(iv). At this step, plaintiff's residual functional capacity (RFC) is 9 considered. If plaintiff cannot perform past relevant work, the fifth and final step in 10 the process determines whether plaintiff is able to perform other work in the national 11 economy in view of plaintiff's residual functional capacity, age, education and past 12 work experience. 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1520(a)(4)(v), 416.920(a)(4)(v); Bowen v.
13 Yuckert, 482 U.S. 137 (1987).

14 The initial burden of proof rests upon plaintiff to establish a prima facie case 15 of entitlement to disability benefits. Rhinehart v. Finch, 438 F.2d 920, 921 (9th Cir.
16 1971); Meanel v. Apfel, 172 F.3d 1111, 1113 (9th Cir. 1999). The initial burden is 17 met once plaintiff establishes that a mental or physical impairment prevents the 18 performance of previous work. The burden then shifts, at step five, to the 19 Commissioner to show that (1) plaintiff can perform other substantial gainful

1 activity and (2) a “significant number of jobs exist in the national economy” that 2 plaintiff can perform. Kail v. Heckler, 722 F.2d 1496, 1498 (9th Cir. 1984).

3 B. Standard of Review

4 Congress has provided a limited scope of judicial review of a Commissioner’s 5 decision. 42 U.S.C. § 405(g). A Court must uphold a Commissioner’s decision, 6 made through an ALJ, when the determination is not based on legal error and is 7 supported by substantial evidence. See Jones v. Heckler, 760 F.2d 993, 995 (9th Cir.
8 1985); Tackett v. Apfel, 180 F.3d 1094, 1097 (9th Cir. 1999). “The [Commissioner’s] 9 determination that a plaintiff is not disabled will be upheld if the findings of fact are 10 supported by substantial evidence.” Delgado v. Heckler, 722 F.2d 570, 572 (9th Cir.
11 1983)(citing 42 U.S.C. § 405(g)). Substantial evidence is more than a mere scintilla, 12 Sorenson v. Weinberger, 514 F.2d 1112, 1119 n 10 (9th Cir. 1975), but less than a 13 preponderance. McAllister v. Sullivan, 888 F.2d 599, 601-02 (9th Cir. 1989).
14 Substantial evidence “means such evidence as a reasonable mind might accept as 15 adequate to support a conclusion.” Richardson v. Perales, 402 U.S. 389, 401 16 (1971)(citations omitted). “[S]uch inferences and conclusions as the [Commissioner] 17 may reasonably draw from the evidence” will also be upheld. Mark v. Celebreeze, 18 348 F.2d 289, 293 (9th Cir. 1965). On review, the Court considers the record as a 19 whole, not just the evidence supporting the decision of the Commissioner. Weetman

1 v. Sullivan, 877 F.2d 20, 22 (9th Cir. 1989)(quoting Kornock v. Harris, 648 F.2d 525, 2 526 (9th Cir. 1980)).

3 It is the role of the Commissioner, not this Court, to resolve conflicts in 4 evidence. Richardson, 402 U.S. at 400. If evidence supports more than one rational 5 interpretation, the Court may not substitute its judgment for that of the 6 Commissioner. Tackett, 180 F.3d at 1097; Allen v. Heckler, 749 F.2d 577, 579 (9th 7 Cir. 1984). Nevertheless, a decision supported by substantial evidence will still be 8 set aside if the proper legal standards were not applied in weighing the evidence and 9 making the decision. Browner v. Secretary of Health and Human Services, 839 F.2d 10 432, 433 (9th Cir. 1987). Thus, if there is substantial evidence to support the 11 administrative findings, or if there is conflicting evidence that will support a finding 12 of either disability or nondisability, the finding of the Commissioner is conclusive.
13 Sprague v. Bowen, 812 F.2d 1226, 1229-30 (9th Cir. 1987).

14 C. Commissioner's Decision

15 The ALJ determined that Plaintiff had not engaged in substantial gainful 16 activity since May 17, 2011 (the application date). The ALJ found that Plaintiff's 17 fibromyalgia, diabetes mellitus, obesity, affective disorders, and anxiety disorders 18 were "severe" impairments under the Act. (Tr. 21).

1           However, the ALJ concluded that Plaintiff did not have an impairment or 2 combination of impairments that met or medically equaled one of the impairments 3 set forth in the Listings. (T at 22).

4           The ALJ determined that Plaintiff retained the residual functional capacity 5 (“RFC”) to perform light work, as defined in CFR § 416.967 (b), except that she was 6 limited as follows: frequent ramp/stair climbing, with occasional climbing of 7 ladders, ropes or scaffolds; simple routine tasks with customary breaks and lunch; no 8 contact with the public for work tasks; occasional contact with coworkers for work 9 tasks; low stress work (defined as work with no more than occasional decision-10 making). (T at 23).

11           The ALJ noted that Plaintiff had no past relevant work. (T at 27). Considering 12 Plaintiff’s age (31 on the application date), education (limited), work experience, 13 and residual functional capacity, the ALJ determined that there were jobs that exist
14 in significant numbers that Plaintiff can perform. (T at 28). As such, the ALJ 15 concluded that Plaintiff was not disabled, as defined under the Social Security Act, 16 between May 17, 2011 (the application date) and February 22, 2013 (the date of the 17 decision) and was therefore not entitled to benefits. (Tr. 28). As noted above, the 18 ALJ’s decision became the Commissioner’s final decision when the Appeals 19 Council denied Plaintiff’s request for review. (Tr. 1-4).

1 D. Plaintiff's Arguments

2 Plaintiff contends that the Commissioner's decision should be reversed. She 3 offers three (3) main arguments. First, she contends that the ALJ did not properly 4 weigh the medical evidence. Second, Plaintiff challenges the ALJ's credibility 5 determination. Third, Plaintiff argues that the ALJ's step five analysis is flawed.
6 This Court will address each argument in turn.

7 8 IV. ANALYSIS

9 A. Medical Evidence

10 In disability proceedings, a treating physician's opinion carries more weight 11 than an examining physician's opinion, and an examining physician's opinion is 12 given more weight than that of a non-examining physician. Benecke v. Barnhart, 13 379 F.3d 587, 592 (9th Cir. 2004); Lester v. Chater, 81 F.3d 821, 830 (9th Cir.
14 1995). If the treating or examining physician's opinions are not contradicted, they 15 can be rejected only with clear and convincing reasons. Lester, 81 F.3d at 830. If 16 contradicted, the opinion can only be rejected for "specific" and "legitimate" reasons 17 that are supported by substantial evidence in the record. Andrews v. Shalala, 53 F.3d 18 1035, 1043 (9th Cir. 1995).

1 An ALJ satisfies the “substantial evidence” requirement by “setting out a 2 detailed and thorough summary of the facts and conflicting clinical evidence, stating 3 his interpretation thereof, and making findings.” Garrison v. Colvin, 759 F.3d 995, 4 1012 (9th Cir. 2014)(quoting Reddick v. Chater, 157 F.3d 715, 725 (9th Cir. 1998)).
5 “The ALJ must do more than state conclusions. He must set forth his own 6 interpretations and explain why they, rather than the doctors’, are correct.” Id.

7 1. Mary Day

8 In October of 2011, Mary Day, Plaintiff’s treating mental health therapist, 9 completed an evaluation report in which she noted that Plaintiff was diagnosed with 10 major depressive disorder (recurrent, severe, without psychotic features) and panic
11 disorder with agoraphobia. (T at 477). She reported that Plaintiff’s anxiety 12 significantly impaired her ability to concrete and interact with others. (T at 477).
13 Ms. Day opined that Plaintiff’s panic/agoraphobia “may impair” her ability attend 14 therapy appointments. (T at 478).

15 Ms. Day completed another mental residual functional capacity assessment in 16 January of 2012. She opined that Plaintiff had marked limitations with regard to her 17 ability to carry out detailed instructions, maintain attention and concentration for 18 extended periods, and perform activities within a schedule, maintain regular 19 attendance, and be punctual within customary tolerances. (T at 370). She also

1 assessed marked limitations with respect Plaintiff's ability to work in coordination 2 with or proximity to others without being distracted by them, interact appropriately 3 with the general public, travel in unfamiliar places or use public transportation, and 4 complete a normal workday and workweek without interruptions from 5 psychologically based symptoms and to perform at a consistent pace without an 6 unreasonable number and length of rest periods. (T at 371-72).

7 In a report completed in June of 2012, Ms. Day noted Plaintiff's diagnosis of 8 major depressive disorder (recurrent, severe, without psychotic features) and panic
9 disorder with agoraphobia. (T at 474). She opined that Plaintiff's panic disorder 10 significantly limited her ability to "tolerate public places" and "keep appointments." 11 (T at 474). In addition, Plaintiff's mood disorder impacted her attention and 12 concentration, organization, task completion, and interactions with others. (T at 13 474). Ms. Day noted that Plaintiff's panic disorder with agoraphobia prevented her 14 from maintaining consistent attendance at her therapy appointments. (T at 475).

15 In evaluating a claim, the ALJ must consider evidence from the claimant's 16 medical sources. 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1512, 416.912. Medical sources are divided into 17 two categories: "acceptable" and "not acceptable." 20 C.F.R. § 404.1502.
18 Acceptable medical sources include licensed physicians and psychologists. 20 19 C.F.R. § 404.1502. Medical sources classified as "not acceptable" (also known as

1 “other sources”) include nurse practitioners, therapists, licensed clinical social 2 workers, and chiropractors. SSR 06-03p. The opinion of an acceptable medical 3 source is given more weight than an “other source” opinion. 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1527, 4 416.927. For example, evidence from “other sources” is not sufficient to establish a 5 medically determinable impairment. SSR 06-03p. However, “other source” opinions 6 must be evaluated on the basis of their qualifications, whether their opinions are 7 consistent with the record evidence, the evidence provided in support of their 8 opinions and whether the other source is “has a specialty or area of expertise related 9 to the individual's impairment.” See SSR 06-03p, 20 CFR §§404.1513 (d), 416.913 10 (d). The ALJ must give “germane reasons” before discounting an “other source” 11 opinion. Dodrill v. Shalala, 12 F.3d 915, 919 (9th Cir. 1993).

12 The ALJ assigned little weight to Ms. Day’s assessments. In particular, the 13 ALJ found the narrative portion of Ms. Day’s January 2012 assessment illegible (the 14 remainder of the assessment was in the nature of a “checkbox” form). Thus, because 15 the ALJ could not access the narrative portion of the therapist’s evaluation, he 16 “presume[d]” that Ms. Day relied “mostly, if not entirely, on [Plaintiff’s] subjective 17 complaints.” In addition, the ALJ noted that Plaintiff terminated services with Ms.
18 Day in August of 2012, which the ALJ believed was not consistent with marked 19 restrictions. (T at 26).

1 This Court finds that the ALJ did not provide “germane reasons” before 2 discounting Ms. Day’s assessments. Plaintiff attended weekly mental health therapy
3 sessions with Ms. Day starting in October 2011 and concluding in August 2012, 4 which gave Ms. Day an extended opportunity to observe and assess Plaintiff’s 5 mental health status. (T at 52-53, 373-472). Contrary to the ALJ’s conclusion, the 6 narrative in Ms. Day’s January 2012 report, while difficult to read, is not illegible.
7 In that narrative, Ms. Day described limitations in Plaintiff’s ability to remember and 8 follow directions and read/recall information, (T at 272). She also noted fluctuations 9 in Plaintiff’s depressed mood. (T at 272).

10 Moreover, even if the ALJ believed Ms. Day’s narrative was illegible, it was 11 error to then adopt a “presumption” that her assessment was based primarily on 12 Plaintiff’s subjective reports. (T at 26). If the ALJ believed the evidence was 13 ambiguous because of his difficulty in deciphering the therapist’s handwriting, the 14 proper response was to re-contact the therapist, rather than adopting a “presumption” 15 unfavorable to Plaintiff. See 20 C.F.R. § 404.1512(e)(1); S.S.R. 96-5p, 1996 SSR 16 LEXIS 2 (1996); Brown v. Heckler, 713 F.2d 441, 443 (9th Cir. 1983) (“In Social 17 Security cases the ALJ has a special duty to fully and fairly develop the record and 18 to assure that the claimant's interests are considered.”); Sims v. Apfel, 530 U.S. 103, 19 110-11, 147 L. Ed. 2d 80, 120 S. Ct. 2080 (2000) (“Social Security proceedings are

1 inquisitorial rather than adversarial. It is the ALJ's duty to investigate the facts and 2 develop the arguments both for and against granting benefits . . . .").

3 In addition, the ALJ concluded that the fact that Plaintiff terminated services 4 with Ms. Day in August 2012 was "not consistent with [the] marked restrictions" 5 assessed by Ms. Day. (T at 26). Before reaching such a conclusion, the ALJ was 6 obliged to consider carefully "information in the case record that may explain 7 infrequent or irregular medical visits or failure to seek medical treatment." SSR 96-8 7p. Here, Ms. Day noted repeatedly that Plaintiff's panic disorder was a serious 9 barrier to her ability to consistently access treatment. (T at 395, 396-97, 413, 414-15, 10 474-76, 478). The ALJ was not necessarily bound to accept this explanation for 11 Plaintiff's termination of treatment, but he was obliged to consider it carefully. The 12 ALJ's conclusory statement that the discontinuance of treatment was "not consistent 13 with marked restrictions" (T at 26) was insufficient to satisfy this standard. Further, 14 as a general matter, "it is a questionable practice to chastise one with a mental 15 impairment for the exercise of poor judgment in seeking rehabilitation." Nguyen v.
16 Chater, 100 F.3d 1462, 1465 (9th Cir.1996)(quoting Blankenship v. Bowen, 874 17 F.2d 1116, 1124 (6th Cir.1989)).

18 The ALJ also found that Plaintiff's "ability to attend medical appointments 19 without incident and complete her daily activities" contradicted Ms. Day's

1 assessments of marked limitations. (T at 26). However, the conclusion that Plaintiff 2 attended her appointments “without incident” is flatly contradicted by the record.<sup>2</sup> 3 As noted above, Ms. Day opined that Plaintiff’s panic disorder interfered with her 4 ability to attend therapy sessions. (T at 395, 396-97, 413, 414-15, 474-76, 478). The 5 record documented several missed appointments due to mental health symptoms. (T 6 at 413, 415, 565). For example, in February of 2012, Plaintiff called Ms. Day and 7 reported that agoraphobia and depression continued to “keep me in the house, just 8 couldn’t get myself out today.” (T at 413). Ms. Day reported that Plaintiff was 9 “struggling with anxiety that is barrier to attending sessions,” although Plaintiff was 10 “willing to use adaptive strategies.” (T at 413). In addition, because Plaintiff 11 became anxious about the “crowd” in the waiting room, Ms. Day suggested that she 12 wait in her car until her appointment time and call support staff to advise them of her 13 arrival. (T at 396). Plaintiff would often drive around Ms. Day’s office, “scoping 14 out” the parking lot, filled with anxiety about her appointment. (T at 364, 398). The 15 ALJ made no effort to reconcile this evidence with his conclusion that Plaintiff 16 attended medical appointments “without incident.” (T at 26). In addition, although

17
18 <sup>2</sup> It is worth noting that the ALJ cites Plaintiff’s participation in therapy as evidence of non-19 disability and then discounts the credibility of her claim because she terminated therapy. In other 20 words, when Plaintiff attends therapy it is considered evidence of non-disability and when she does not attend therapy it is also deemed evidence of non-disability.

1 the ALJ discounted Ms. Day's opinion based on Plaintiff's purported ability to 2 attend medical appointments "without incident," he discounted Plaintiff's credibility 3 by citing her "inconsistent attendance" at such appointments. (T at 24-25).

4 The ALJ also felt Plaintiff's activities of daily living were inconsistent with 5 Ms. Day's assessment of marked limitations. However, these activities (grocery 6 shopping, running errands, taking daily walks, and engaging in "pleasurable 7 activities"), (T at 26) are relatively limited in nature and required significant support.
8 For example, Plaintiff has difficulty leaving her home and her daughter does the 9 majority of grocery shopping. (T at 51).

10 The Ninth Circuit "has repeatedly asserted that the mere fact that a plaintiff 11 has carried on certain daily activities ... does not in any way detract from her 12 credibility as to her overall disability." Orn v. Astrue, 495 F.3d 625, 639 (9th Cir.
13 2007) (quoting Vertigan v. Halter, 260 F.3d 1044, 1050 (9th Cir. 2001)). "The 14 Social Security Act does not require that claimants be utterly incapacitated to be 15 eligible for benefits, and many home activities are not easily transferable to what 16 may be the more grueling environment of the workplace, where it might be 17 impossible to periodically rest or take medication." Fair v. Bowen, 885 F.2d 597, 18 603 (9th Cir. 1989).

1 Recognizing that “disability claimants should not be penalized for attempting 2 to lead normal lives in the face of their limitations,” the Ninth Circuit has held that 3 “[o]nly if [her] level of activity were inconsistent with [a claimant’s] claimed 4 limitations would these activities have any bearing on [her] credibility.” Reddick v.
5 Chater, 157 F.3d 715, 722 (9th Cir. 1998)(citations omitted); see also Bjornson v.
6 Astrue, 671 F.3d 640, 647 (7th Cir. 2012)(“The critical differences between 7 activities of daily living and activities in a full-time job are that a person has more 8 flexibility in scheduling the former than the latter, can get help from other persons . .
9 ., and is not held to a minimum standard of performance, as she would be by an 10 employer. The failure to recognize these differences is a recurrent, and deplorable, 11 feature of opinions by administrative law judges in social security disability 12 cases.”)(cited with approval in Garrison v. Colvin, 759 F.3d 995, 1016 (9th Cir.
13 2014)).

14 Critically, given the diagnosis of anxiety disorder (which the ALJ recognized 15 as a severe impairment) the ALJ should have considered very carefully the 16 limitations Ms. Day assessed with regard to Plaintiff’s ability to handle the stress 17 demands of competitive, remunerative work activity. Stress is “highly 18 individualized” and a person with a mental health impairment “may have difficulty 19 meeting the requirements of even so-called ‘low-stress’ jobs.” SSR 85-15. As such,

1 the issue of stress must be carefully considered and “[a]ny impairment-related 2 limitations created by an individual’s response to demands of work . . . must be 3 reflected in the RFC assessment.” Id.; see also Perkins v. Astrue, No. CV 12-0634, 4 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 144871, at *5 (C.D.Ca. Oct. 5, 2012). The ALJ’s
5 consideration of Ms. Day’s assessment did not satisfy this standard for the reasons 6 outlined above.

7                   2. Dr. Udell

8           Dr. Mindy Udell has been Plaintiff’s primary care physician since she was 15
9 years old. (T at 361). In January of 2010, Dr. Udell opined that Plaintiff’s 10 fibromyalgia and depressive disorder limited her ability to concentrate, interact with 11 people, and perform exertional activities (i.e. lift more than 5 pounds, stand for 12 longer than 5 minutes, and sit for more than 30 minutes). (T at 485). She concluded 13 that Plaintiff was unable to work. (T at 485).

14           In April of 2011, Dr. Udell reported that Plaintiff’s fibromyalgia limited her 15 physical ability to work and her depression limited her ability to maintain a job and 16 attend to follow-through. (T at 221). She opined that Plaintiff was limited to lifting 17 10 pounds, but could frequently lift or carry files and small tools and could sit, walk, 18 and stand for brief periods. (T at 222). In August of 2011, Dr. Udell again opined 19
20

1 that Plaintiff's fibromyalgia limited her physical ability to work and her depression 2 limited her ability to maintain a job and attend to follow-through. (T at 224).

3 The ALJ assigned little weight to Dr. Udell's assessments, finding her 4 conclusions inconsistent with Plaintiff's "ability to attend medical appointments 5 without incident and complete her daily activities." (T at 26). This conclusion is 6 not supported by substantial evidence. As noted above, the ALJ's finding that 7 Plaintiff attended medical appointments "without incident" is not consistent with the 8 evidence. The ALJ's statement that Plaintiff's activities of daily living contradict 9 the limitations assessed by Dr. Udell is conclusory. In other words, the ALJ does 10 not explain how or why those activities contradict Dr. Udell's findings. The ALJ 11 also does not appear to have accounted for the fact that Plaintiff was able to perform 12 her limited activities of daily living with family support and free from the demands 13 of maintaining a regular schedule, meeting deadlines, and handling the stress of 14 competitive employment.

15 The ALJ also stated that Dr. Udell failed to provide "objective testing or other 16 evidence to support the findings." (T at 26). However, the record contains numerous 17 treatment notes that support Dr. Udell's assessments. (T at 265, 267, 317, 332, 337, 18 542). The Commissioner contends that the ALJ properly discounted Dr. Udell's 19 opinions because the physician did not make specific reference to her treatment

1 notes and history in her assessments. However, the Commissioner offers no support 2 for the suggestion that Dr. Udell should be presumed to have ignored her (lengthy) 3 treating history when rendering opinions regarding the nature and extent of 4 Plaintiff's limitations. Moreover, the Ninth Circuit has held that a treating 5 physician's failure to specifically reference or annotate the treatment history in her 6 assessments is not a proper basis for discounting those assessments. See Burrell v.
7 Colvin, 775 F.3d 1133, 1140 (9th Cir. 2014)(“Indeed, Dr. Riley's assessments are of 8 the ‘check-box’ form and contain almost no detail or explanation. But the record 9 supports Dr. Riley's opinions because they are consistent both with Claimant's 10 testimony at the hearing and with Dr. Riley's own extensive treatment notes which, 11 as discussed above, the ALJ largely overlooked.”)(emphasis in original).

12 The ALJ also noted that in July of 2009, Dr. Udell reported that Plaintiff's 13 condition did not meet “at least 11 of the 18” pressure points for the fibromyalgia
14 criteria, which the ALJ found contradicted her opinion that Plaintiff's fibromyalgia 15 symptoms restricted her ability to work. (T at 26). However, the ALJ does not 16 explain how the pressure point finding actually contradicts Dr. Udell's assessments.
17 This omission is of particular relevance since the ALJ accepted the diagnosis of 18 fibromyalgia and found it was a severe impairment. (T at 21). In addition, the 19 “tender points” or “pressure points” test is not the exclusive method of diagnosing 20

1 fibromyalgia. See SSR 12-2p. As such, having accepted the diagnosis of 2 fibromyalgia and having recognized it as a severe impairment, the ALJ was obliged 3 to at least explain why Dr. Udell’s “pressure points” finding nevertheless provided a 4 basis for discounting her opinion.

5 Lastly, the ALJ appears to have considered the assessments of Dr. Udell and 6 Ms. Day in isolation, i.e. without considering the fact that they were mutually 7 supporting. In other words, the ALJ discounted both opinions as inadequately 8 supported by the record without (apparently) considering the fact that they were 9 consistent with each other. This omission was significant given the extensive 10 treatment history both providers had with Plaintiff (and thus the opportunity both 11 had for observations of Plaintiff over an extended period of time).

12 For the foregoing reasons, this Court finds that the decision to discount the 13 opinions of Dr. Udell and Ms. Day cannot be sustained.

14 B. Credibility

15 A claimant’s subjective complaints concerning his or her limitations are an 16 important part of a disability claim. Batson v. Comm’r of Soc. Sec. Admin., 359 F.3d 17 1190, 1195 (9th Cir. 2004)(citation omitted). The ALJ’s findings with regard to the 18 claimant’s credibility must be supported by specific cogent reasons. Rashad v.
19 Sullivan, 903 F.2d 1229, 1231 (9th Cir. 1990). Absent affirmative evidence of 1 malingering, the ALJ's reasons for rejecting the claimant's testimony must be "clear

2 and convincing." Lester v. Chater, 81 F.3d 821, 834 (9th Cir. 1995). "General
3 findings are insufficient: rather the ALJ must identify what testimony is not credible 4 and what evidence undermines the claimant's complaints." Lester, 81 F.3d at 834; 5 Dodrill v. Shalala, 12 F.3d 915, 918 (9th Cir. 1993).

6 In this case, Plaintiff testified as follows: She is 5' 3" tall and weighs 265 7 pounds. (T at 45). She takes her medication as prescribed and testified that she has 8 always done so. (T at 50). Fibromyalgia and anxiety prevent her from working. (T 9 at 50). Being in a public place causes severe panic attacks. (T at 51). The prospect 10 of being in an unfamiliar place fills her with dread and makes it difficult to leave her 11 home. (T at 51). Plaintiff's daughter does most of her grocery shopping. (T at 51).
12 Trying to leave the house more frequently causes an increase in her symptoms. (T at 13 52). Plaintiff tries to stay at home unless she absolutely needs to leave. (T at 52).
14 Her stress also causes knee pain and makes it difficult to get up and move around. (T 15 at 54). She has trouble sleeping and experiences feelings of guilt and worthlessness.
16 (T at 55). Her mind is "constantly running," which makes it difficult to concentrate.
17 (T at 56). Reading and sitting through a movie are difficult. (T at 56). She does not 18 believe she is emotionally or physically stable enough to hold down a job. (T at 57).
19 During the day, Plaintiff listens to the radio, does cleaning, and cares for her four-

1 year old daughter. (T at 60). She recently moved and was changing mental health 2 providers; her last therapy session was six months prior to the hearing. (T at 65).

3 The ALJ found that Plaintiff's medically determinable impairments could 4 reasonably be expected to cause some of the alleged symptoms, but that her 5 statements concerning the intensity, persistence, and limiting effects of the 6 symptoms were not fully credible. (T at 24).

7 This Court finds that the ALJ's credibility assessment is not supported by 8 legally sufficient evidence. The ALJ found Plaintiff's testimony not "reasonably 9 consistent with the medical evidence." (T at 23). However, as outlined below, 10 Plaintiff's claims were supported by assessments from her treating physician (Dr.
11 Udell) and mental health therapist (Ms. Day), both of whom had the opportunity to 12 observe and evaluate Plaintiff over an extended period of time. The 13 contemporaneous treatment notes support Plaintiff's claims of frequent panic 14 attacks, depression, and agoraphobia. (T at 317, 322, 357, 398, 400). The ALJ 15 faulted Plaintiff for non-compliance with doctor recommendations regarding diet, 16 blood sugar monitoring, and exercise (T at 24), but did not address the impact that 17 Plaintiff's (undisputed) mental health issues had on her ability to exercise the 18 necessary discipline to make these lifestyle changes. (T at 317). This was error
19 under SSR 96-7p; see also Dean v. Astrue, No. CV-08-3042, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS

1 62789, at *14-15 (E.D. Wash. July 22, 2009)(noting that “the SSR regulations direct 2 the ALJ to question a claimant at the administrative hearing to determine whether 3 there are good reasons for not pursuing medical treatment in a consistent manner”).

4 The ALJ also cited Plaintiff’s “inconsistent attendance” at her medical 5 appointments as another factor that “erode[d]” her credibility. (T at 24-25).
6 However, the ALJ did not reconcile this conclusion with Ms. Day’s finding that 7 Plaintiff’s severe anxiety was a “barrier to attending sessions.” (T at 413). In 8 addition, as discussed above, on the one hand, the ALJ discounted Plaintiff’s 9 credibility based on inconsistent attendance at appointments, but then discounted the 10 assessments of Dr. Udell and Ms. Day because of Plaintiff’s purported “ability to 11 attend medical appointments without incident . . . .” (T at 26). The ALJ does not 12 explain these inconsistent conclusions.

13 Lastly, the ALJ also noted that “[s]econdary gain issues may also be present.”
14 (T at 25). In particular, the ALJ noted that Plaintiff had a limited work history, 15 financial stressors as a result of being a single mother, and relied on referrals to food 16 banks and charitable resources to provide for her family. (T at 25). The ALJ found 17 that these concerns “suggest[ed]” that Plaintiff “could be attempting to portray more 18 extensive limitations than are actually present in order to increase the chance of 19 obtaining benefits.” (T at 25).

1        However, no treating provider suggested malingering or symptom
2 exaggeration. The ALJ recognized that Plaintiff suffers from severe impairments, 3 including anxiety disorder. Plaintiff alleges that she suffers from debilitating 4 impairments (including difficulty even leaving her house), which render her unable 5 to work. It would be surprising indeed if Plaintiff did not have financial problems.
6 Plaintiff is seeking Social Security benefits to ameliorate the financial burdens 7 caused by her inability to work. This hardly makes her unique among claimants and, 8 indeed, this is the very purpose of having a system that provides such benefits in the 9 first place. Absent affirmative indications of malingering or symptom exaggeration, 10 it is not proper to discount a claimant's credibility for trying to obtain SSI benefits 11 for their intended purpose. See Edgar v. Astrue, No. 08-6379-AC, 2010 U.S. Dist.
12 LEXIS 69226, 2010 WL 2730927, at *5 (D. Or. June 2, 2010) ("The ALJ may not 13 chastise a claimant for seeking disability benefits payments; such reasoning 14 circumvents the very purpose of disability benefit applications"); Walker v. Colvin, 15 No. CV 12-2248, 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 46260, at *18-19 (C.D.Ca. Mar. 28, 16 2013)("[B]eing under 'financial pressure' is not a legitimate reason for disbelieving 17 plaintiff's subjective allegations.").

18        This Court accordingly finds that the ALJ's credibility determination cannot 19 be sustained.

1 C. Step Five Analysis

2 At step five of the sequential evaluation, the burden is on the Commissioner to 3 show that (1) the claimant can perform other substantial gainful activity and (2) a 4 “significant number of jobs exist in the national economy” which the claimant can 5 perform. Kail v. Heckler, 722 F.2d 1496, 1498 (9th Cir. 1984). If a claimant cannot 6 return to his previous job, the Commissioner must identify specific jobs existing in 7 substantial numbers in the national economy that the claimant can perform. See 8 Johnson v. Shalala, 60 F.3d 1428, 1432 (9th Cir.1995). The Commissioner may 9 carry this burden by “eliciting the testimony of a vocational expert in response to a 10 hypothetical that sets out all the limitations and restrictions of the claimant.” 11 Andrews v. Shalala, 53 F.3d 1035, 1039 (9th Cir.1995). The ALJ's depiction of the 12 claimant's disability must be accurate, detailed, and supported by the medical record.
13 Gamer v. Secretary of Health and Human Servs., 815 F.2d 1275, 1279 (9th 14 Cir.1987). “If the assumptions in the hypothetical are not supported by the record, 15 the opinion of the vocational expert that claimant has a residual working capacity 16 has no evidentiary value.” Gallant v. Heckler, 753 F.2d 1450, 1456 (9th Cir. 1984).

17 Here, the ALJ’s step five analysis relied on the testimony of Paul Prachyl, a 18 vocational expert. (T at 28). However, the hypothetical questions presented to the 19 vocational expert by the ALJ assumed a claimant able to perform low stress work on 20

1 a consistent basis, without public contact with the public. (T at 65-69). When asked 2 whether a hypothetical claimant with limitations similar to those assessed by Dr.
3 Udell and Ms. Day could perform any competitive work, the vocational expert said
4 no. (T at 70-71). As outlined above, the medical evidence demonstrated the Plaintiff 5 could not consistently demonstrate the ability to handle the stress demands of 6 competitive, remunerative work and, in fact, would likely experience marked panic 7 attacks and other difficulties if required to attend to the changes and other demands 8 of regular work activities. Accordingly, the opinion of the vocational expert has no 9 evidentiary value and cannot support the ALJ's conclusion.

10 C. Remand

11 In a case where the ALJ's determination is not supported by substantial 12 evidence or is tainted by legal error, the court may remand for additional 13 proceedings or an immediate award of benefits. Remand for additional proceedings 14 is proper where (1) outstanding issues must be resolved, and (2) it is not clear from 15 the record before the court that a claimant is disabled. See Benecke v. Barnhart, 379 16 F.3d 587, 593 (9th Cir. 2004).

17 In contrast, an award of benefits may be directed where the record has been 18 fully developed and where further administrative proceedings would serve no useful 19 purpose. Smolen v. Chater, 80 F.3d 1273, 1292 (9th Cir. 1996). Courts have

1 remanded for an award of benefits where (1) the ALJ has failed to provide legally 2 sufficient reasons for rejecting such evidence, (2) there are no outstanding issues that 3 must be resolved before a determination of disability can be made, and (3) it is clear 4 from the record that the ALJ would be required to find the claimant disabled were 5 such evidence credited. Id. (citing Rodriguez v. Bowen, 876 F.2d 759, 763 (9th 6 Cir.1989); Swenson v. Sullivan, 876 F.2d 683, 689 (9th Cir. 1989); Varney v. Sec'y of 7 Health & Human Servs., 859 F.2d 1396, 1401 (9th Cir.1988)).

8 Here, this Court finds that a remand for calculation of benefits is the 9 appropriate remedy. The treating physician and mental health therapist both 10 assessed significant limitations. Their opinions were supported by the treatment 11 history and consistent with Plaintiff's testimony, which was improperly discounted.
12 Although the ALJ referenced assessments by non-examining State Agency review 13 consultants that supported his determination (T at 27), this does not constitute 14 substantial evidence sufficient to override the treating providers' opinions or 15 otherwise sustain the ALJ's decision. See Lester v. Chater, 81 F.3d 821, 831 (9th 16 Cir. 1995)(citing Pitzer v. Sullivan, 908 F.2d 502, 506 n.4 (9th Cir. 1990)). There are 17 no outstanding issues that must be resolved before a determination of disability can 18 be made.

2 IV. ORDERS

3 IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that:

4 Plaintiff's motion for summary judgment, Docket No. 14, is GRANTED.

5 The Commissioner's motion for summary judgment, Docket No. 17, is 6 DENIED.

7 This case is remanded for calculation of benefits,

8 The District Court Executive is directed to file this Order, provide copies to 9 counsel, enter judgment in favor of Plaintiff, and CLOSE this case.
